

Environmental Policy

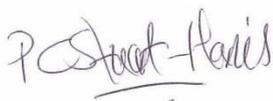

Bailey Partnership is an independent, multi-disciplinary practice providing a wide range of property and construction consultancy services across the United Kingdom. We operate from our offices across southern England. Our team includes CIBSE Low Carbon Consultants, Chartered Environmentalists and architectural designers who are members of the Green Register of Construction Professionals. These environmental specialists work to implement this policy and support our other disciplines which include architecture, interior design, building surveying, project management, quantity surveying, building services engineering, Planning Consultants, and CDM Advisor.

We recognise that our activities and services may have an impact on the environment and we are committed to preventing pollution, meeting compliance obligations and reducing our environmental impacts wherever and whenever possible. In all our activities, working practices and business relations we will seek to protect, conserve and enhance all aspects of the environment over which we have control or influence whilst protecting the best interests of our clients.

Our Environmental Management System (EMS) has been independently certified as complying with the requirements of ISO 14001:2004 and we are currently updating our systems to comply with the newly published ISO 14001:2015 standard. Our EMS sets out a framework to implement our commitment to continuously improving our environmental performance through a series of procedures, controls and regular audits. Objectives and targets for improvement of specific, measured impacts have been set and the outputs for these are regularly monitored and reviewed to identify actions where needed.

The Partners of Bailey Partnership are committed to direct and support persons contributing to the effectiveness of the EMS, ensuring it is aligned with our business strategy, all current and emerging policies, and environmental guidance.
